THE CENTURY OF SCIENCE deals with the complexities of modern science in easy-reading, non-technical language. It gives you fascinating glances behind the doors of research centers, laboratories and test installations. You go to Langley Research Center . . . Oak Ridge National Laboratory . . . Mt. Palomar Observatory . . . the North Pole . . . Kitty Hawk . . . a jungle temple in Tikal, Guatemala . . . Kofa Game Range at Yuma, Arizona . . . Walter Reed Army Medical Center . . . Cape Canaveral—many other spots where science is making history today.

The Author. Dr. Watson Davis is director of Science Service, Washington, D. C., an endowed, non-profit institution, which disseminates science news to the U.S. press and to the public.

Dr. Davis is editor of the Science News Letter (weekly), and also originated Things of Science, an experimental kit issued monthly by Science Service. He is the guiding spirit behind the Science Youth Program which sponsors junior science clubs numbering over a million members.

Dr. Davis has won honors and appointments far too numerous to list. He is a member of the National Inventors Council, and also has sat on Navy, Patent Office, National Institutes of Health and National Academy of Sciences Boards. He took a major hand in the development of Interlingua (an international language which can be read by every educated person without special study) and Microfilm.
