If you are among the thousands of readers who have enjoyed Murray and Rigney's Paper Folding for Beginners (Dover, $1.00). You are in for an agreeable surprise. We have just reprinted an unusual book that offers you:

Paper-folding fun and geometry instruction at the same time!

When this book first appeared, it attracted the enthusiastic attention of two top Western mathematicians, W. W. Beman and David Eugene Smith, both math professors, saw the potential Row's book had for teaching geometry by way of exercises that were not only instructive but fun in and for the doing. They adapted the text for Western readers and added dozens of photographs to supplement Row's diagrams.

Time hasn't changed the value of the book that resulted. By following the clear instructions and folding or ruling the lines indicated on a piece of paper, you will work out proofs, demonstrate dozens of geometrical truths, set up some of the well-known geometry problems of history.

And the exercises will be right in front of you—concrete, step by step, easy to see and comprehend!

If you are looking for something different by way of recreational fun . . . starting to study the basics of geometry on your own . . . teaching geometry . . . trying to help a youngster with his lessons, this book is for you. 87 diagrams and photographs of actual folded sheets see to it that the already clear instructions are even more clearly presented.

A supplement to classroom texts

An invaluable aid for at-home study

An unusual source of paperfolding fun

Row's book is a three-in-one value, especially at the low, low Dover price. Whatever your own reasons are for reading it and enjoying it, you will find it a rewarding, stimulating work.
