ACTION—Re-Action

Recognize Sir Isaac Newton in this picture? Ever since that apple he's looked this way. But the main thing is this machine, a model of the Museum of Science & Industry (Chicago) demonstration. You can't be without it. Steel balls click in rhythm, and they can do more things than we know. Set this on your desk, show all the principles you know . . . invent some new ones. (MY 8-year-old child did just that.)

$7 for one, $5 for 5 (total $25) all prices postage paid.

PETRIFIED DINO DROPS

150 million years ago the giant dinosaurs that roamed our earth left adventurers their bones. But that was not all! Men have discovered their droppings! During the vast time span, these droppings have become petrified, like rock, and now can be found in remote corners of the world in this amazing jadelike form. Small chips are treated like gem stones by skilled craftsmen who slab and polish them for 840 hours into the most fantastic jewelry we have seen. Mounted on the best quality findings they are then crafted into stunning cufflinks, multi-colored with reds, greys and blues. Dino Drops are scientifically named Coprolite, from the Greek Kopron (dung) and Lithos (stone). This fossilized excrement of extinct animals is a 150-million-year old treasure. Order #AA707 . . . (Dino Drops) . . . $9.95 per pair.
