TRW ENCOUNTER CONTEST

Are you witty, original, brilliant? Of course you are. Would a dummy be reading an ad like this? Here's a chance to demonstrate your creative prowess and perhaps even to win one of the many prizes we are about to bestow on bright people like you.

On December 3 of this year, the Pioneer 10 spacecraft (which TRW built for NASA-Ames Research Center) will encounter the giant planet Jupiter, half a billion miles from earth. Jupiter is so gigantic (it contains 70% of the planetary mass of the solar system) that it will fling Pioneer 10 up and out of the solar system.

Because Pioneer 10 will be the first man-made object to leave the solar system, it carries a plaque (see above) with a message to other forms of life which might exist in space. (One current scientific guess is that there are at least a billion such places in the universe.) The plaque tells where and when the spacecraft originated and shows the relative size and appearances of man and woman.

Whom might they meet? What might they say? In the balloons we have added to the plaque, write in your proposed conversation between man, woman, and the creature they might encounter. In the space provided draw the creature. (You may use call-outs to identify its parts.)

MAIL YOUR ENTRY TO US here at Space Park postmarked before midnight on NOVEMBER 15th. Entries will be judged on the basis of originality, imaginativeness, and humor. The decisions of the judges are final and all entries become the property of TRW Systems. No TRW employees or their immediate families are eligible. Contest void where prohibited by law. See the list of prizes (below) and mail in your entry TODAY, you clever person.

The world's most extraordinary laboratory.

The mouth.

We speak with it. Yet it also communicates without saying a word. In thousands of ways. The mouth may hold answers to many serious human ills. The Laboratory of the Body reports the startling findings — and the provocative possibilities — of this broad exploration in dental research.

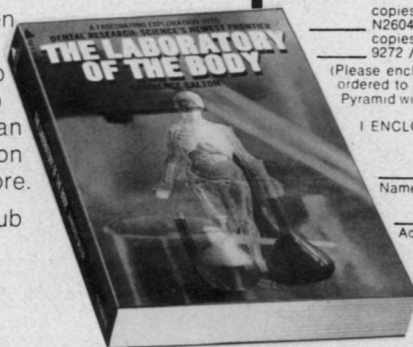

Over thirty biomedical disciplines — practically all of the sciences — are now profoundly involved in linking the causes of oral pains and discomforts with diseases which affect the entire body. Rheumatism, arthritis, aging, hardening of the arteries, asthma, cleft palate, cystic fibrosis, cancer — these are just a few of the areas explored, just a few of the diseases described in The Laboratory of the Body.

Is aging reversible? Is there a link between periodontal disease and diabetes? Is saliva a potential diagnostic tool similar to urine or blood? Through the sponsorship of the American Dental Association, veteran science writer and scholar Lawrence Galton researches these questions and many more.

The co-author of a Book-of-the-Month Club
