Mrs. Byrne's Dictionary of Unusual, Obscure, and Preposterous Words

Yes, for years I couldn't remember the right words. People I considered complete idiots were finishing my sentences for me. I was leaving blanks in my love letters and suicide notes. I found how bleak the future was when I tried a little cephalonamancy (fortunetelling by boiling an ass head), and tyromancy (fortunetelling by watching cheese coagulate).

I went from doctor to doctor looking for help, finally becoming a confirmed iatrapistiac (one having little faith in doctors), especially when one suggested I needed a hepaticocholangiocholecystenterostomy (look it up).

Then I found Mrs. Byrne's Dictionary. Now I can be unusual, obscure and preposterous by turns. Now I don't need an unabridged to go along with my collegiate. For entertainment now, I browse instead of groak (watching people silently while they eat, hoping they'll ask you to join them). I don't care anymore that we have a kakistocracy (government or rule by the worst).

Mrs. Byrne's Dictionary by Josefa Heifetz is better than omphaloskepsis!

GARDYLOO!

Herb Caen in the San Francisco Chronicle: "Wildly funny!"

Leslie Hanscom in Newsday: "You can dip in anywhere and come up with pay dirt . . . hundreds of words to stand your hair on end. Only a clinchpoop could scan these pages without a feeling of awe at the undiscovered boundaries of the English tongue!"

Nels Nelson in the Philadelphia Daily News: "A treasure! We should all kiss the publisher's feet!"

Camilla Snyder in the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner: "Hilariously useful . . . delicious!"

Donald B. Thackrey of United Press International: "A dictionary you can browse through and read like a book . . . a dictionary that will give great pleasure to many. Every page contains at least one nugget."

Sydney J. Harris in the Chicago Daily News: "There is no comparable work; I unreservedly recommend it."

Catts Cuts the Cost of Command Training

Every time there's a military budget squeeze, the Army is forced to cut back on field exercises. It's inevitable. In terms of logistics alone, live training is expensive. But there are much more serious costs in terms of lost opportunities for realistic practise, particularly in the difficult art of making command decisions at the battalion level.

Fortunately, something can be done about it and the Army is doing it...with CATTS, which is TRW's Combined Arms Tactical Training Simulator.

Instructors in command center.

To people who have already used this system, it is almost misleading to call it a "simulator." Because what impresses them most is its realism.

The students work in a standard mobile command post with fully functional communications equipment. In a separate area, teams of experienced controllers play the parts of subordinate units, adjacent units, higher headquarters, and a wily, well-equipped enemy force. Operating through a carefully programmed computer system, the controllers present their students with changing battlefield conditions, analyze their responses, and challenge them with new problems that range from bad weather, misunderstood orders, and supply foul-ups to unexpected increases in enemy strength.

The student is forced to think, sweat, and make life or death decisions under conditions of stress that very closely approximate real battlefield environments.

Student commanders in tactical operations center.

In addition to its realism, CATTS has a fundamental advantage over the old-time sand table and other less sophisticated systems. This is its objectivity. The computers model the effects of decisions and the computers have been programmed by independent specialists who are not involved in the training at all. This eliminates a lot of judgement calls at the operational level and frees the judges for the more important business of judging on the basis of actual results.

In order to develop CATTS, TRW started an independent research and development program of formidable size and complexity several years ago. This provided a solid foundation of experience on which the detailed models and software for CATTS were built. The result is an unusual capability that is now being applied to even more complex training needs within the Department of Defense. If you are interested in using TRW's skills in this area, you are invited to write and tell us about your specific needs.
