But now there's a magazine that's written—and illustrated—to be read by everybody who's interested in biology, paleontology, evolution, animal behavior, geology and related subjects. A publication that can be read by both scientists and general readers for information and enjoyment.

FOSSILS Magazine tells about the beginnings of life, the evolution of living things, the changing environments of earth. Every issue brings you articles about the latest scientific interpretations of the fossil record, written by leading paleontologists, biologists, geologists, chemists and other scientists.

FOSSILS shows what life was like millions of years ago. No magazine has ever contained so many excellent pictorial restorations of past life forms. Every issue takes you on a fascinating and informative journey back through time, to see in vivid detail the creatures and environments of past ages.

FOSSILS is scientific, yet highly readable. Every issue presents important information with scientific accuracy. And yet, because professional scientists work closely with professional writers to prepare articles, FOSSILS is a pleasure to read.
