A clear, concise, and comprehensive guide to the world—and words—of modern business and economics.

DICTIONARY OF BUSINESS AND ECONOMICS

By Christine Ammer and Dean S. Ammer

Completely new and timely, the Dictionary contains more than 3,000 entries (twice as many as any other book of its kind), written in simple, direct language devoid of jargon. This easy-to-use volume of definitions, examples and background material includes the language of modern management, current national economic measurements, and relevant new laws and government policies, as well as basic computer-related terms. For the taxpayer, stockholder, or consumer who wants to decipher the fine print... for anyone who requires a better understanding of business and economics. $19.95

You can become the confident, decisive leader people want and need.

NO-NONSENSE MANAGEMENT

A General Manager's Primer
Richard S. Sloma

Are you an "achiever" or do you merely have the potential to be an effective general manager? As every successful manager knows, there are no rewards granted for effort; they are granted only for results. Richard Sloma clearly describes seventy principles (and shows how to make them work) that general managers must follow if they are to be identified with high levels of performance. The author shows you how to deal decisively with employees' failures and mediocrity; get a financial report that really tells you everything you want to know; and rank your time and project selection according to impact on profitability. You will increasingly gain management momentum as you implement more and more of the many no-nonsense principles... principles that will unleash your stored up talent in unprecedented quantities. $7.95

Is boredom and a sense of "withering on the vine" becoming more and more frequent among professionals?

WORK, AGING, AND SOCIAL CHANGE

Professionals and the One Life—
One Career Imperative
Seymour B. Sarason

How great a problem is finding satisfaction from work for highly educated professionals? How often do they seek or fantasize about new challenges through a career change? This book examines these important, but neglected questions in a provocative study of the interrelationships among individual values and expectations, and the sense of aging. It shows how changes in our society dramatically increased the professional's "great expectations" and set the stage for a head-on collision between personal growth as a value and the one life—one career imperative. $14.95

Who becomes a Nobel laureate in science, and what happens to those who do?

SCIENTIFIC ELITE

Nobel Laureates in the United States
Harriet Zuckerman

This absorbing study provides the first "group portrait" of Nobel prize-winners in American science, exploring the life histories of the ninety-two laureates between 1901 and 1972 who did their winning research in the United States. It is based on in-depth interviews with most of the living laureates, and includes many of their comments. Critically examining the Nobel prize itself as a symbol, and as an institution of reward, the book also reveals the politics of Nobel prize winning—and the ironies of success. $14.95

How does emotional stress affect the way you make decisions?

DECISION MAKING

A Psychological Analysis of Conflict
Irving L. Janis and Leon Mann

At last! A comprehensive general theory of decisional conflict that actually applies to stress-inducing real-world problems... with clear-cut guidelines for all persons interested in improving the quality of personal decision making. The authors discuss distinctive patterns of coping behavior: careful appraisal of alternatives, rapid and impulsive choice, procrastination, and "passing the buck." A decision involving vital personal, professional, or political choices need not be a source of profound stress for the decision maker. Read Decision Making—a major contribution to the analysis of decision making in particular and human behavior in general. $15.95
