DRAW!—a feast for the imagination. They're unique and useful books for your own library—or for holiday giving.

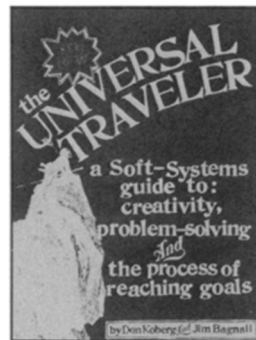

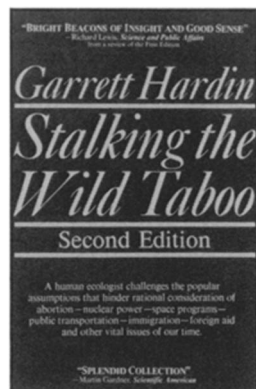

Professor E. McSquared's Calculus Primer. Swann & Johnson. 214 p., 8½x11, illus. Through brilliant use of cartoons and ingenious analogy, the Professor introduces calculus with incredible energy, humor and clarity. Ideal for self-study.

"Highly recommended . . . throughout the authors lavishly spread their humor, poking fun at the 'gobbledygook' and mystique of mathematics, while putting across the ideas of analysis."—London Times Educational Supplement. $7.95 paperback. A

Stalking the Wild Taboo. 2nd Ed. Garrett Hardin. 268 p., 6x9. A leading human ecologist challenges the popular assumptions that hinder rational consideration of abortion, nuclear power, space programs, foreign aid and other vital issues of our time. "Bright beacons of insight and good sense."—Science and Public Affairs. $4.95 paperback B $11.95 hardcover C

The Universal Traveler. Koberg and Bagnall. (125,000 in print.) 128 p., 8½x11, illus.

"This is probably the book most likely to open the doors to problem-solving kinds of thinking . . . Its digestible-pieces format . . . could be applied to persons needing to do work in groups, to reach goals, get work done or . . . to size up the journey of life."—Rainbook: Resources for Appropriate Technology. $5.95 paperback. D

DRAW! Hanks and Belliston. 242 p., 10x9, illus. An all-ages approach to the visualization skills so important to complete mental development. Over 900 illustrations and clear explanations of technique. "The point is that anyone can and should draw."—Booklist. $9.75 paperback E $19.75 hardcover F

What's So Funny about Science? Sidney Harris. 120 p., 6x9. Over 100 inimitable cartoons on a remarkable range of scientific subjects. A selection of the Library of Science Book Club. "What's so funny about science? Why, Sidney Harris, that's what!"—Isaac Asimov. $3.95 paperback G $7.95 hardcover H

The Kanji ABC. Andrew Dykstra. 185 p., 8½x11, illus. The origins and uses of 338 kanji, the 3,000-year-old character writing of China and Japan. "An entertaining and easy-to-understand guide: Recommended. Also an excellent source for . . . demonstrating calligraphy."—Focus on Asian Studies. $6.95 paperback I
