1,300 Great Thinkers tell you what they think

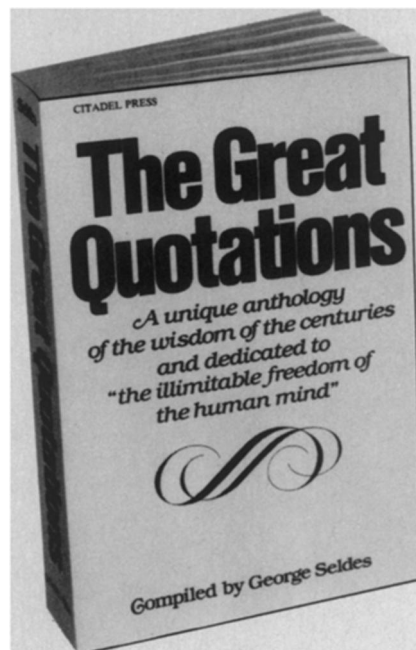

That's right, more than 1,300 great thinkers present their ideas in George Seldes' The Great Quotations. Since the book is 893 pages and weighs almost three pounds, it isn't very easy to pick up; but once you start reading, we guarantee it'll be even harder to put down.

Though there are many books of quotations, The Great Quotations is unique. Other collections suffer from too many safe sentiments and similar thinkers; this revolutionary anthology contains the broad spectrum of ideas which have moved human-kind for better or worse.

So you'll find Marx, Mao and Mussolini beside Epicurus, Emerson and Einstein.

You'll find Jimmy Durante and Al Capone, but not Jesus or Shakespeare, who are readily available everywhere else.

You'll find a diverse group the likes of which has never before been assembled, including:

Mortimer Adler
Edmund Burke
Winston Churchill
Clarence Darrow
Charles Darwin
John Dewey
Benjamin Franklin
Sigmund Freud
Ernest Hemingway
Aldous Huxley

Thomas Jefferson
Samuel Johnson
V. I. Lenin
Abraham Lincoln
Horace Mann
Henri Matisse
Napoleon Bonaparte
Isaac Newton
Eugene O'Neill
J. Robert Oppenheimer

George Orwell
Linus Pauling
Ivan Pavlov
Pablo Picasso
Plato
Franklin D. Roosevelt
Bertrand Russell
Albert Schweitzer
George Bernard Shaw
Adam Smith

Adlai E. Stevenson
Jonathan Swift
Henry David Thoreau
Alexis de Tocqueville
Leo Tolstoy
Mark Twain
Voltaire
Daniel Webster
Walt Whitman
Oscar Wilde

The Great Quotations is enlightening, enjoyable and inspiring. It took George Seldes more than 30 years to compile.

Which is why Saturday Review said, "This book demands its own space on every bookshelf."
