Agriculture in the Twenty-First Century — John W. Rosenblum, Ed. Brings together experts from diverse disciplines who examine the issues of and the possibilities for agriculture around the world in the next century. Wiley, 1983, 415 p., illus., $29.95.

Annual Review of Anthropology, Vol. 12 — Bernard J. Siegel, Ed. Covers topics in archaeology, biological anthropology, linguistics, regional anthropology and cultural-social anthropology. Annual Review, 1983, 481 p., illus., $27.

Bridges to Infinity: The Human Side of Mathematics — Michael Guillen. These readable essays on a variety of topics in mathematics, written for the nonmathematician, convey the excitement about mathematics that the author has felt since childhood. Why there is a need for a zero in our number system, what a four-dimensional world would look like, catastrophe theory and why it is useful are just a few of the concepts that Guillen discusses as he introduces the general reader to mathematicians and their ideas. J P Tarcher (HM), 1983, 204 p., $12.95.

Healthy Living in an Unhealthy World — Edward J. Calabrese and Michael W. Dorsey. Describes problems in the environment and tells how our health is affected. Discusses the effect of diet on environmental disease for the general reader. S&S, 1984, 223 p., $15.95.

Menopause: A Guide for Women and the Men Who Love Them — Winnifred Berg Cutler, Celso-Ramón García and David A. Edwards. This book is written by bio-medical experts who are involved in research on and the care of menopausal women. Recently expanded knowledge in the areas of aging and hormones relevant to women in menopause are detailed here. The subject of changing sexuality is examined. Hormone replacement therapy is discussed and its benefits and risks are set forth. Norton, 1983, 245 p., illus., $15.

Mind's Eye of Richard Buckminster Fuller — Donald W. Robertson. Fuller's patent lawyer explains how Fuller's discoveries and inventions are interwoven with his mathematics and philosophy, thereby helping to reveal the true dimensions of Fuller's most thought-provoking inventions. Originally published by Vantage Press in 1974. St. Martin, 1983, 109 p., illus., $7.95.

Seashore Life of the Northern Pacific Coast: An Illustrated Guide to Northern California, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia — Eugene N. Kozloff. Plants and animals that inhabit the rocky shores, sandy beaches, bays and estuaries are described in detail and beautifully illustrated. U of Wash Pr, 1983, 370 p., color/b&w illus., $40, paper, $19.95.

Spires of Form: Glimpses of Evolution — Victor B. Scheffer. A distinguished zoologist writes about animal evolution and the remarkable adaptation of animals to their surroundings. Illustrated with beautiful line drawings by Gretchen Daiber. U of Wash Pr, 1983, 152 p., illus., $13.95.
