Academic Science, Higher Education and the Federal Government 1950-1983—John T. Wilson. Surveys the changing government policies toward academic science and higher education from the "highly productive partnership" of the post-World War II era to the growing atmosphere of mutual suspicion and confrontation that has intensified in the Reagan administration. Wilson feels that the relation between higher education and the federal government has been so fundamentally altered that a review of it by the academic leadership is essential. U of Chicago Pr, 1983, 116 p., $10, paper, $3.50.

The Fossil Collector's Handbook: A Paleontology Field Guide—James Reid Macdonald. Covers for the non-professional the basics needed for collecting fossils in a scientific manner. Tells how to record the essential data, how to prepare the specimens for storage and display and how to organize a large field trip for a dozen or more participants. P-H, 1983, 193 p., illus., $16.95, paper, $8.95.

The Lifelong Nutrition Guide: How to Eat for Health at Every Age and Stage of Life—Brian L. G. Morgan. A nutritionist provides for the general reader the basic elements of sound nutrition. Explains how to design a healthy diet and how to eat during the different stages of life. P-H, 1983, 207 p., charts & graphs, $14.95, paper, $7.95.

The Low Maintenance Garden—Graham Rose. For those who seek the pleasure of a garden but can spend only minimum time on upkeep. Supplies advice on garden lay-out and design, guides gardeners through plant varieties that require minimal upkeep and provides tips on labor-saving gardening techniques. Viking Pr, 1983, 168 p., color/b&w illus., $26, paper, $12.95.

Mountain Experience: The Psychology and Sociology of Adventure—Richard G. Mitchell, Jr. A book about mountains and the people who climb them. Examines what it is like to be a mountaineer as "the occupant of a role and the participant in a relationship." The climber's world is composed of people. How these people interact and influence each other is the subject of this study. U of Chicago Pr, 1983, 272 p., $22.50.

Princes and Peasants: Smallpox in History—Donald R. Hopkins, foreword by George I. Lythcott. Tells the story of this dread infection, relating its devastating impact on the prosperous and the poor in every inhabited continent on earth, from its suspected origins in prehistory to its eradication by the World Health Organization in 1977. U of Chicago Pr, 1983, 380 p., illus., $25.

The Situation is Hopeless, but Not Serious: The Pursuit of Unhappiness—Paul Watzlawick. What this book wants to offer, according to the author, "is a methodic, basic introduction—drawn from decades of clinical experience—into the most useful and reliable mechanisms for the pursuit of unhappiness." Norton, 1983, 125 p., $10.95.
