

"If I could buy one reference book, would I buy this one? The answer is yes. The Random House Encyclopedia is a home library of considerable worth, the kind of book I could imagine any one of my children lying on the floor engrossed in reading . . . I found myself fascinated."

— Robert Kirsch
Los Angeles Times

"The most beautiful book of information I have ever seen."

— Curt Suplee
Washington Post

This encyclopedia is specifically designed to serve adults and young people in today's visually oriented world; its pictures are as important as the text in making both the rich legacy of our history and culture and the complexities of scientific and technical subjects understandable.

Organized into four principal sections, the encyclopedia revolutionizes information retrieval by presenting knowledge in the way the mind normally receives it, by linking and associating ideas, facts, concepts and visual images. The first section, the colorpedia, is a series of full-color, two-page articles, each on a single subject and each related thematically to the articles that precede and follow it. The second section, the alphapedia, contains alphabetically arranged entries that summarize information on that topic and reference the appropriate articles appearing in the colorpedia, drawing the reader into new areas of related knowledge.

This extraordinary reference book is rounded out with a time chart of important events in human culture from 4000 B.C. to 1990 A.D. and a full-color Rand McNally Atlas of the World. The concluding section is an extensive bibliography of 1,500 citations arranged according to the themes of the colorpedia. This unique organization makes the encyclopedia a browser's dream as well as a valuable learning tool.
