

BONES OF THE EAR

It is an easy task for the fancy to see the traditional "hammer, anvil and stirrup" in this photograph of the human ear ossicles made by George A. Smith of Quarryville, Pa. Attached to the end of the hammer is the shriveled ear drum.

BIOLOGY

By HOWARD M. PARSHLEY

Professor of Zoology
Smith College

EDITED BY GERALD WENDT

HERE IN small compass is the challenging story of life and living things. Dr. Parshley writes of structural organization and chemical composition, of reproduction and development, of inheritance and environment. And finally, the absorbing account of evolution and variation conclude a book which will be of interest to all who want an acquaintance with the basic facts of biology and life. $2.25
