MEDICINE

Pedigreed Mouse Output Reaches All-Time High

► THE MOUSE output of the world's most famous center for rearing pedigreed mice for medical research reached an all-time high this year.

More than 470,000 of the specially-bred disease fighters were sent throughout the world from the Jackson Memorial Laboratory, Bar Harbor, Me. An additional 730,000 mice stayed behind at the Laboratory where they were used in the continuing fight against cancer and other diseases.

The Laboratory, which sells the animals at cost and is the only one of its kind, finds, however, that the demand is still far exceeding the supply and has planned to step up the output with an additional 300,000 specially-bred mice per year.
